PRESS RELEASE

LSLA elects new President

Wednesday 12 March 2014

The London Solicitors Litigation Association (LSLA) has today elected commercial litigation specialist John Bramhall as its new President.

John, a Partner with DAC Beachcroft LLP, is taking over from Francesca Kaye of Russell- Cooke LLP to serve a two-year term in office, leading one of the country's key representative groups for litigation lawyers.

With 25 years of experience in a wide range of international commercial, financial and City-related commercial disputes, John's role as President will allow him to represent the views of the London litigation community at what is a challenging time for the profession.

John has been a member of the LSLA throughout his legal career, during which time he has played a key role in ensuring the views of the organisation are represented at the highest level.

On taking up his new role, John commented, "I am delighted to take over the role of President of the LSLA. London is a world class centre for dispute resolution and is the venue of choice for international litigation. As President, I am keen to do whatever I can to maintain London's key place at the centre of international and domestic dispute resolution.

"Francesca Kaye has overseen some fundamental changes in the association and I hope to be able to build on both her and the LSLA's success."

Notes to Editors

LSLA was formed in 1952 and represents the interests of a wide range of civil litigators in London. It has some 1,400 members throughout London among all the major litigation practices, ranging from the sole practitioner to major international firms.

Members of the LSLA Committee sit on the Civil Justice Council, the Civil Rule Committee, The Law Society Civil Litigation Committee, the Commercial Court Users Committee and the Supreme Court Costs Group, to name but a few.

This has helped top make the LSLA the first port of call for consultation on issues affecting civil and commercial litigation in London.
